Dear fellow classmates,

With joint effort of our group, our project “Interviewing Older Generations about Their Lifestyles” turned out to be a huge success. Here, I'm honored to share our experience in how to carry it out.

Aiming to bridge generation gap and deepen mutual understanding, the project offers us an insight into various lifestyles seniors have. To conduct an in-depth interview, you'd better make a full preparation in advance, including the lists of interviewees and questions. During the interview, gentle words and soft tone are necessary to encourage the old to open their hearts and share more. Last but not least, don't forget to organize the collected information and write a report.

Hopefully, you'll find our experience useful and be ready to start your own project.

Thank you!

第二节（满分25分）

With desperate tears, she suddenly spotted a boat with a figure walking on it. She waved and cried for help with all her strength. It seemed like a century later when she heard someone yelling back to her. As the boat was approaching, Kiana pointed to her father and sister and screamed, “They are in the water! Help!” She was soon picked up and taken towards where her father and sister were. Fortunately, they didn’t drown but her father seemed to be giving out, with one hand holding tight to the boat, the other holding Cierrah.

Once rescued, they were rushed to shore, where a concerned group waited for their arrival. They gave clothes and blankets to the three poor people, and then the ambulance arrived. Kiana, her sister and her father were checked on the spot and finally sent to the nearest hospital. Later, when asked what gave her the strength and perseverance to continue, both in the cold water and in great fear, Kiana thought it had to do with family. “I just wanted to save my family, and I didn’t want anything bad to happen to them. So I couldn’t spare a second to worry or fear.” she said.
